Call for Workshop, Panel, and Special Event Proposals

Alaska Anthropological Association Anchorage 2015 The Alaska Anthropological Association

We are now accepting proposals for workshops, panels, and special events to be held at the 2015 aaa conference in Anchorage.

Workshops are held on Wednesday, 4 March and limited space is available, so proposals are first come, first serve!

We will be working with the Anchorage Museum to plan several exciting special events - if you have any ideas or wish to volunteer, please e-mail us!

The Association is still looking for a host for the 2016 meeting. Please e-mail alaskaanthro@g-mail.com to nominate your campus or agency as a host.

Please e-mail all proposals or questions about the conference to

President's Message 2

Message from the President

Rachel Joan Dale, Association President

Dear members,

I hope everyone had a good summer to energize us for the coming winter season! Speaking of which, it's that time of the year when we need to call for nominees for the Board of Directors. There are three open seats as well as the President's position for this coming election. Jenya Anichtchenko has served two terms and is no longer eligible for re-election. Jeff Rasic and Molly Odell are not running for re-election. I am willing to run for a second term as President, if nominated.

All members of the Alaska Anthropological Association are eligible to serve as officers. To nominate an aaa member for a Board position, please complete a nomination form, available on the website. It is not necessary to live in Anchorage to serve. Association officers can join meetings by teleconference. Before submitting a nomination for someone other than yourself, please make sure that the proposed candidate is willing to serve.

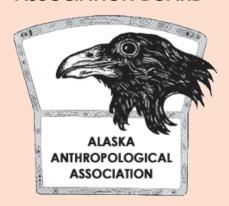

The Association accepts nominations for officer positions from 1 September to 15 November of each year. Candidates with the most nominations are added to the election ballot. Ballots are distributed with the December newsletter and association members must submit their completed ballots by 1 February. Election results will be announced at the 2015 annual meeting.

In other news, our website programmer will begin work on the website upgrade by the end of the month. The user interface will look familiar but there will be upgrades in the user displays, like pull down menus.

We have been consulting with Eva Gardner, a lawyer who specializes in copyright law. With her guidance, we have drafted an authorship agreement and an image rights supplement that the Association will require from authors prior to publication. The Board will be reviewing these documents for September's Board meeting. These copyright documents will be used for both the Alaska Journal of Anthropology and the Aurora series. The Alaska Anthropology Association will own the copyright and will have full authority to publish and republish online. This will allow aaa to sell articles, journals and the Aurora series through our website as well as through JSTOR. We also have an image rights document that we can use universally or on a case-by-case basis.

Vivian Bowman and I have completed a five-year summary of the Association's financial activity. We would like to work with the Board of Directors to develop a projected five-year budget to help future boards manage Association finances, including investments. A budget will be presented at the 2015 Annual Business Meeting. We are looking forward to completing these projects this fall and moving forward on our other projects such as rewriting scholarship criteria and developing standard operating manuals for future officers.

The purpose of the Alaska Anthropological Association is to serve as a vehicle for maintaining communication among people interested in all branches of anthropology; to promote public awareness and support for anthropological activities and goals; to foster knowledge, understanding, and appreciation of Alaska Native and circumpolar cultural heritage; to work in collaboration with Indigenous communities on all aspects of research and education; and to facilitate the dissemination of anthropological works in both technical and non-technical formats.

Membership is open to any individual or organization indicating an interest and concern for the discipline of anthropology. The Association holds its annual meeting during March or April of each year and generally publishes four newsletters each year.

The membership cycle begins each year on 1 January. Annual membership dues include a subscription to the Alaska Journal of Anthropology. Dues are $40 for student members and $75 for regular members. US dollar checks or money orders should be made out to the Alaska Anthropological Association. To join, send a membership form and payment to the Alaska Anthropological Association at PO Box 241686, Anchorage, Alaska USA, 99524-1686.

Please e-mail submissions to the newsletter to the editor, Sally Carraher, at sfcarraher@uaa.alaska.edu.

Out and About 3

Out and About: Recent Happenings in Alaska Anthropology

Sally Carraher, Newsletter Editor

"Out and About" is an opportunity for our readers to hear the latest news, achievements, and other information about our colleagues and our discipline.

If you know of an Alaska or northern individual, institution, or group that deserves recognition for recent work; or a colleague who has recently won an award, scholarship, or grant; or has embarked on an exciting new career journey or field work experience; or who has achieved a professional or personal milestone in their lives, please submit that information to our editor at sfcarraher@uaa.alaska.edu.

Anchorage

Roy Agloinga recently held a discussion at the Anchorage Museum and Smithsonian Arctic Studies Center about the endangered language of his home town of White Mountain, an Iñupiaq village. This is one of several events sponsored by the "Recovering Voices Program" of the Smithsonian. For more information about the program or upcoming events, visit http://recoveringvoices.si.edu.

Fairbanks

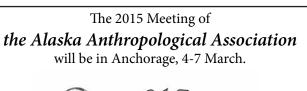

Congratulations to Nancy Bigelow, and all those working with her, for the recent discovery of some very tiny, but very cool remains: 22 fossilized seeds and an ancient beetle, which she hopes can teach us more about Alaska's climate and vegetation over 100,000 years ago.

Specifically, these microwonders fill in an important gap in Alaska's record. Whereas many sites date to between 10-14,000 years ago, at the end of the Pleistocene, Bigelow's analysis of these materials will shed light on what Alaska was like in between two older ice ages, at a time when the world was warmer than today. Congrats on the exciting find, Nancy!

Kodiak

Great news from Kodiak this fall! The Alutiiq Dance History Project was funded by the Alaska State Museum to develop an archive of photos, documents, and video chronicling the efforts of the Cuumillat'stun (Like Our Ancestors) Alutiiq Dance Group, which was established in the 1980s to revitalize Alutiiq dancing after the practice had nearly disappeared under previous Russian, and then American, colonization. The project's goal is "to unite and preserve the community resources and knowledge that contributed to the reawakening of Alutiiq dance."

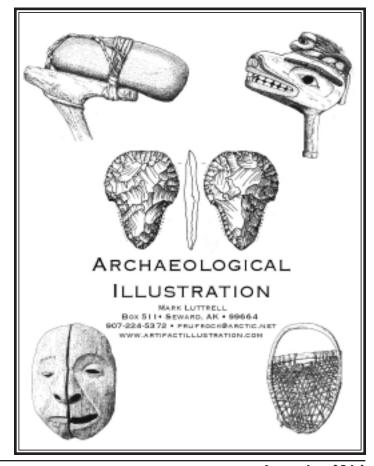

For all conference-related business and questions, please email the organizers directly at

Please e-mail us with your proposals, ideas, or a suggestion for the 2015 meetings.

Archaeology Day is October 18, 2014

Diane Hanson, Association member

International Archaeology Day is being celebrated in Anchorage on Saturday, October 18 from 10am to 5pm at the south end of the University Center Mall, on Old Seward Highway and 36th Street. Parking is free. Archaeology Day is sponsored by the Archaeological Institute of America and is a chance for archaeologists to show other Alaskans the work we do, new discoveries in the state, to participate in demonstrations, and to talk to archaeologists.

There will be presentations on artifact identification, animal bones from archaeological sites, basket making, a mock dig, archaeology films, making stone tools, and of course, the famously entertaining annual atlatl throw.

Different agencies and contractors will also have displays showing the archaeological research they are doing across the state of Alaska.

Be sure to check it out, and bring the whole family! Archaeology Day this year falls on Saturday, October 18. Come see us at the University Center any time throughout the day, from 10a.m. - 5p.m.

For more information about archaeology day generally, visit http://www.archaeological.org/archaeologyday. If you would like to participate by presenting a demonstration, an activity, or if your agency or company would like a table for a display, please contact Diane Hanson at dkhanson@uaa.alaska.edu.

Alaska Consortium of Zooarchaeology News

Rhea Hood, ACZ President

We would very much appreciate updating your links to our site with the new URL: alaskazooarch.org. Our email address has also been updated: alaskazooarch@gmail.com.

The Christina Jensen ACZ Scholarship will be available this spring. The Christina Jensen Scholarship is a $500 scholarship awarded during the aaa annual meeting. It's open to any student working on zooarchaeological research who is also a member of the aaa. The application and deadline will be available on the aaa website this winter.

The ACZ is very happy to thank David Yesner for his donation to the Christina Jensen Scholarship fund. By his generous support, the scholarship recipient will be closer to achieving their goals.

Planning is underway for the 42nd Annual Meeting of the Alaska Anthropological Association, hosted by the University of Alaska Anchorage Anthropology Department.

The ACZ Workshops are all-day events. Typically, registration fees are $40 and $15 for students. Late fees for covering additional materials may be applied if you register after the deadline.

If you have any ideas for future workshops or are a professional who would like to share your knowledge, we would enjoy hearing from you.

To register for the 2015 ACZ workshop, visit: http://www.alaska-zooarch.org/workshop.html.

Recent Publications

Richard Stern, Association member

The purpose of this column is to bring recent publications in the field of Alaska anthropology to the attention of Newsletter readers. Alaska anthropology is defined broadly to include the traditional four-field approach of anthropology subject matter. The Alaska region is similarly broadly defined to include Alaska, neighboring Canada, the Northwest Coast, Siberia, and more generally, the circumpolar North. Publications include published books, journal articles, web pages, unpublished reports ("grey literature"), or other information which may be of interest. Readers are encouraged to share publications which come to their attention with this column.

Obituary 5

In Memory: Richard Dauenhauer

Peter Metcalfe, Association member

Richard Dauenhauer – educator, linguist, folklorist, anthropologist, ethnohistorian, and former Poet Laureate for Alaska – passed away peacefully on August 19, 2014, in Juneau following a brief illness. He was 72.

Dauenhauer, with his wife Nora, elevated the appreciation of Tlingit oral tradition to the status of world literature through their careful translations and documentation of Tlingit speeches and stories.

The two also enriched, revised, and updated post-contact Tlingit ethnohistory through their collaborations with the late Lydia Black, which explored the interaction of Indigenous people with Russian colonists.

In 1980, inspired by the depth and breadth of the traditional oratory during the first Traditional Elders Conference held at Sitka in 1980, the couple published Because We Cherish You, Sealaska Elders Speak to the Future (1981). This small but influential book articulated the twin priorities of the elders: Support for education assistance and a commitment to language preservation. These are priorities that have become the primary goals of the Sealaska Heritage Foundation.

The Dauenhauers went on to publish the "Classics of Tlingit Oral Literature" series.

Richard and Nora received Before Columbus Foundation's American Book Award twice, for Haa Tuwanáagu Yís (1991) and for Anóoshi Lingít Aaní Ká in (2009).

As a folklorist and linguistic anthropologist, Richard Dauenhauer made major contributions to the study of subjects such as ideological and emotional issues involved in language loss, consequences of transition from a purely oral to written language use, and syncretism in folklore and religion.

Dauenhauer is also remembered for his lyric poetry that embraced cultures across the world yet remained focused on Lingít Aaní (Southeast Alaska, the domain of the Tlingit).

Richard was born in Syracuse, NY, in 1942. He received his B.A. in Slavic Languages from Syracuse University, and his M.A. in Comparative Literature from the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

In 1973, he married Nora Marks and became an honorary member of the Tlingit people. He was adopted by Nora's father, Willie Marks, into the Chookaneidi Clan, Brown Bear House, of Hoonah, Alaska.

A lector and ordained reader of the St. Nicholas Russian Orthodox Church of Juneau, Richard loved theology, liturgical music, and the feasts celebrated by the church. He sang bass with the Tlingit Choir.

He was a founding member of Tlingit Readers Inc. and the Sharing Our Knowledge conferences of Tlingit Tribes and clans.

"Richard was a key person of the 'Clan Conference' organizing committee," said his friend and colleague, Gerry Hope, the conference executive director. "He took delight in bringing together academics interested in Tlingit culture, language, and similar topics with Alaska Native culture bearers in a spirit of mutual respect and equality. His knowledge and experience have made a positive and strong imprint, for which we are grateful."

Richard Dauenhauer's concern for the survival of Tlingit language gave impetus to establishing the Tlingit Language Program at University of Alaska Southeast.

He retired as UAS professor of Alaska Native Languages and Culture in 2011, receiving in 2013 the Bullock Prize for Excellence—the University of Alaska Foundation's most generous award.

He is deeply missed and fondly remembered by many.

Alaska Journal of Anthropology

The forthcoming issue of the Alaska Journal of Anthropology (Vol. 12(1) - 2014) is non-thematic; it includes coastally-focused sociocultural and archaeological contributions that range geographically from the Beaufort Sea to Seward Peninsula.

Breaking further new ground for the journal, one contribution is a series of excerpts from a remarkable, unpublished dissertation completed 45 years ago. We recently sent this issue to the printer, so members should begin receiving their copies by early October.

Work is also underway on the second 2014 issue of AJA [i.e., Vol. 12(2)], the heart of which is a set of papers compiled by Amber Lincoln and Patrick Plattet titled "Reindeer Herding on the Alaska Peninsula: A New Comparative Perspective."

The editors hope to have this issue ready for the printer by the end of the calendar year.

New contributions are always welcome so please consider submitting your work (articles, reports, essays) to AJA, and remember to encourage your colleagues to do so as well.

Your editors, Ken Pratt and Erica Hill

Journal of Northwest Anthropology

The Journal of Northwest Anthropology has compiled articles related to Alaskan anthropology into one electronic document and made it available for free on its website. The document,

"A Compilation of Alaska-Related Articles from the Journal of Northwest Anthropology, 1971 –2012," can be found at http://northwestanthropology.com/items.php. The compilation includes a forward by Co-Editor Deward E. Walker, Jr., and 15 articles totaling 275 pages.

The JNA, published semiannually by Northwest Anthropology LLC in Richland, Washington, is a refereed journal and welcomes contributions of professional quality dealing with anthropological research in northwestern North America, including Alaska.

Theoretical and interpretive studies and bibliographic works are preferred, although highly descriptive studies will be considered if they are theoretically significant.

The primary criterion guiding selection of papers will be how much new research they can be expected to stimulate or facilitate. Prospective authors should contact Dr. Darby C. Stapp, Co-editor, at P.O. Box 1721, Richland, WA 99352; dstapp@pocketinet.com; 509-554-0441.

2015 Conference Update

Updates on the 42nd Meeting of the Alaska Anthropological Association

Diane Hanson, Association member

The Department of Anthropology at the University of Alaska Anchorage will host the meetings of the Alaska Anthropological Association at the Hilton Hotel in downtown Anchorage on 4-7 March, 2015. This corresponds with the final week of the Fur Rondy and Saturday is the ceremonial start for the Iditarod, so there will be many fun activities during your visit to Anchorage. Be prepared, however, for some difficulty parking downtown.

Wednesday, 4 March is set aside for workshops. The Alaska Consortium of Zooarchaeologists will hold their workshop in the newly remodeled labs at UAA in Beatrice McDonald Hall. Their guest presenter this year is Dr. R. Lee Lyman from the Department of Anthropology at the University of Missouri. Registration for the ACZ workshop is $25.

Also on 4 March, Interdisciplinary Museum Educator Kelly Gwynn from the Anchorage Museum and Sally Carraher, Assistant Professor of Cultural and Medical Anthropology at UAA, will co-chair a workshop on methods and field research, at the Hilton Hotel. This workshop is ideal for students. Registration for this workshop is $25, and all proceeds benefit the UAA Cultural Research Lab, for the purposes of buying new equipment and software that students and young scholars can use for their work.

If you are interested in holding another workshop, please contact us by 1 December, because space is limited for Wednesday.

The reception will be held in the atrium of the Alaska Museum on the evening of 4 March. Smithsonian Arctic Studies Center exhibit will be left open for us that evening. There will refreshments and you can pick up your packets, or register for the meetings. Parking will be available in the garage at the museum. For more information about this amazing exhibit, visit https://www.an-choragemuseum.org/exhibits-events/permanent-exhibits/alaska-native-culture/.

Our speaker at the annual awards banquet this year will be Dr. Mark Nutall of the University of Alberta. He will speak on the impact of climate change upon Arctic communities. Photo courtesy of Mark Nutall.

Paper presentations begin Thursday, 5 March. Friday is the evening awards banquet and our speaker will be Dr. Mark Nuttall from the University of Alberta. His specialty is studying the effect of climate change on Arctic communities. Saturday will be busy with a luncheon speaker, a business meeting at the end of the paper presentations, and the Belzoni Society meeting that evening. The luncheon speaker is yet to be determined.

We are setting up a page on the Alaska Anthropological Association web site that will have links for Hotel Reservations at the Hilton. Rooms will be $99 for a single or a double, $119 for a triple, and $139 for a room with four beds. Internet is complimentary in the rooms during the meetings. The Hilton asks that all room reservations be made by Friday, 13 February. After that, they will be release for general sale, and considering the other Fur Rondy events going on in Anchorage that week, the remaining rooms will go quickly.

Deadline to submit abstracts for papers and symposia is 2 January, 2015. We appreciate receiving symposia abstracts and information early. The forms to submit abstracts are on the Alaska Anthropological Association website. If you have questions or concerns, please email us at aaaconference@uaa.alaska.edu.

42nd Meeting at a Glance
